Mr. Peres's remarks followed a meeting between Premier Yitzhak Rabin, the Israeli chief of intelligence and the parliament's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee.

The defense minister said the air attacks into Lebanon, which began after the guerrilla attack at Kiryat Shemona on April 11, were designed to hurt the guerrillas themselves and show the Lebanese leadership that it is responsible for guerrilla raids launched from its territory.

Mr. Peres said the guerrillas now had weapons more sophisti-cated that the Lebanese Army itself possessed. Military sources have said the Israeli fighter-bombers raiding guerrilla bases yesterday encountered Soviet-made SAM-7, shoulder-fired

U.S. Said to Resist Soviet Plan Of 5% Is Set For Nixon to Travel to Yalta On N. Atlantic

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, June 21 (NYT) .- A disagreement has developed be-tween Soviet authorities and the White House advance team over whether President Nixon should go to Yalta during his forth-coming visit, reliable sources reported tonight.

American officials see this as a matter of political importance, and not merely scheduling and other arrangements.

The White House, informaous said, is refusing to have Mr. Nixon go to Yalta because of the bad connotations in the West from decisions made there during the 1945 wartime meeting of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill. Their decisions affected the future division of Europe and particularly the Communist control of Po-

To some extent, the May figures reflected the end of price controls April 30, although the process of decontrol had begun well before that time. In particular, the 1.2 percent increase in medical services probably stem-med in good part from the free-dom of doctors, laboratories and hospitals to increase their charges after a long period of control.

For the first time since Septemher, the rise in wages last month outpaced the rise in prices again possibly reflecting the end of wage control. Both hourly earnings and the average workweek were up, and "real" earnings rose

In the food category, fruits and vecetables led the way last month in an increase of seven-tenths of 1 percent in the index, or ninetenths after seasonal adjustment. All of the main food categories went up except for meats, poultry and eggs. The new monthly report on retail gasoline prices showed a further rise of 2.4 percent last month to a nationwide average of 55 cents a gallon for regular and 58.7 cents for premium. Since October, just before the steep increases began, regular gasoline has risen 36.7 percent and premium 33.6 percent.

Rome Stops Paying Interest On Gigantic Municipal Debt

By Paul Hofmann

City of Rome today etopped paydebts in a decision underscoring the disarray of public finances in all of Italy.

"We are on the verge of bankruptcy." Budget Commissioner Carlo Merolli said.

He explained that he had suspended the city's debt service to be able to pay the salaries of its 25,000 employees.

Some municipal departments and agencies are already in arrears. House Tape Transcripts Vary Widely From Nixon Versions the 19 tape recordings Mr. Nixon has surrendered to the panel, were contained in several of the 14 confidential memos written hy William Dixon, a Democratic lawyer on the permanent staff of the Judiciary Committee.

Ten of the memos were made available to The New York Times by a Republican committee mber who has generally supported Mr. Nixon in the impeachment investigation. Republicans obtained the documents Wednesday after complaining that some of the memos had been given to reporters by Democratic committee sources.

Complaints About Leaks

At the White House various officials have complained this week that leaks from Democrats on the committee were designed to prejudice the Presideot's defense against impeacliment.

Some of the contents of the memos have sceped into public print during the last week. But uoue of the Democratic sources had disclosed so many of the documents, nor had it been apparent from selected portious of the documents bow extensively committee transcripts dllfered from those prepared by the White House.

Mr. Dixon wrote the memos, between early May and last week. in response to requests from some Democrats for private guidance in analyzing the voluminous evidence presented at the impeachment hearings.

The memos suggest approaches that committee members could take to show that evidence would support the incrimination of the President in impeachable crimes, Mr. Dixon noted in several of the documents, however, that the evidence "may be interpreted differently by others." Reform of Congress' Budget Role Passed

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, June 21 (WP). -A bill making sweeping reforms in the way Congress handles the nation's $300-billion annual bndget won final Senate approval on a 75-to-0 vote today, clearing it for President Nixon's signature. The hill is aimed at recapturing power over federal spending from the White House by setting up a new system that will allow Congress for the first time sentencing were Colson's wife, to look at the budget as a whole and to make sharp cuts at the end of the year II needed to keep prayer group he joined after his

"This is a proud moment lor Congress," said Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., one of the Republicans who helped shepherd the bill to final approval. Nixon Signature Expected President Nixon is expected to sign the bill despite provisious curbing presidential power to impound congressionally appropriated funds. The Senate GOP leader, Hugh

Scott, of Pennsylvania, said the bill has overwhelming support in both chambers and members consider it "an internal reform" of the utmost importance. The bill arose out of criticism leveled both by members of Congress and by the White House -that Congress at present considers each appropriation and spending measure separately. without any attempt to calculate an overall spending level or to assess the impact on the economy of the total federal budget. As result, the criticism ran, the sum of all the individual hills often adds up to a total far in excess of the amount dictated by economic prudence, with disastrous effects for the economy.

Power Jealousy

If the president then tries to cut hack spending he is accused of "usurping" congressional powers. To remedy this situation, the bill sets up new budget committees in both the House and the Senate to look over all proposals for federal spending, fix an overall target surplus or deficit figure. set a ceiling on outlays as a whole. and divide up the overall spending total among 14 broad categories such as defense, natural resources, health and agriculture. The budget committees would have the aid of a new congressional budget office to help evaluate economic and spending pro-

On May 15 each year, on the basis of recommendations from the budget committees, Congress would have to pass a concurrent resolution setting out target spending figures for the entire government. During the remainder of the spring and summer, the regular appropriations bills, handled by the existing appropriations committees, would be passed. On Sept. 15. Congress would pass a second concurrent resolution adjusting overall spending targets in accord with economic and policy developments since May 15 "Reconciliation Bill"

If the totals in the individual appropriations bills add up to more than the target figures in the Sept. 15 concurrent resolution, then Congress by Sept. 25 would have to pass a 'reconciliation bill" making any cutbacks needed to stay within the Sept. 15 guidelines. This "reconciliation bill" is the key step in the drive to impose fiscal responsibility In order to give Cougress time to complete the new process each year, the start of the fiscal year at present July I, will be shifted to Oct, 1. Thus, the reconcillation bill will be completed five days before the new fiscal year

The final bill also provides that If the President wants to impound appropriated funds for policy reasons, he must ask Congress to pass a special cutback bill; if it refuses, he is forbidden to freeze the funds. But if he simply wants to defer making an outlay, he can do so unless either chamber passes a resolution insisting that he release the money. The switchover to an Oct. 1 starting date for the fiscal year is to take place Oct. 1, 1976, and the overall new budget procedure is required to be used for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1976. which is fiscal 1977. But it is expected that Congress will begin putting it into effect in the preceding year as a tryout.

The 'Leak' Issue

-the lady in this case being a composite of those White House gentlemen who are taking such sudden, horrified offense at the ancient, if not always honorable, practice of leaking to the press. Three of the President's most faithful servants—Ken Clawson, Patrick Buchanan and Gerald Warren-have raised quite a furor on this matter in recent days. Mr. Buchanan expresses his outrage over "malicious leaks out of House Judiclary, seemingly aimed at damaging and destroying in print the reputations of the President and his secretary of state." For purposes of identification, this is the same Patrick Buchanan who, in his capacity as a special presidential consultant, wrote a memorandum to John Ehrlichman in July of 1971 which also had to do with the subject of leaks and with destroying reputations. True, in this memorandum, Mr. Buchanan expressed his reservations about a project subsequently carried forward by the White House and expressly designed to gather and disseminate—which is to say, "leak"—damaging information about Daniel Ellsberg. But it is interesting to note why Mr. Buchanan frowned on the idea. He did not, for example, interpose any ethical or legal arguments against this use of the time and energies of members of the President's staff. Rather, he said that opinion on this issue had been decided and was "not going to be turned around in the public mind by a few well-placed leaks... This is not to argue that the effect is not worthwhile-but that simply we ought not now to start investing major personal resources in the kind of covert operation not likely to yield any major political dividends to the President." The President—heavens to Betsy, we almost forgot all that dialogue in those transcripts of confidential conversations which the President himself made public and in which on more than one occasion he conducts something of a seminar on the utility nf the calculated leak. Do you remember the angulshed discussions of how some secret FBI information might be leaked to the detriment of the public reputations of some prominent Democrats? Do you remember the President's offer to his assembled leakers of what he called "IRS stuff" for purposes of discrediting his political opposition? Do you

We think the lady doth protest too much remember that phase in which the President was contemplating the convening of a grand jury to pre-empt the Senate Watergate cnmmittee hearings and simultaneously to manufacture an excuse for his subordinates and campaign associates to decline to make further public comment nn Watergate matters? Let us refresh your memory on that because it had an interesting angle: Some of the statements made in confidence before the grand jury, it was apparently thought, might in fact look good for the White House If they were made public-so what was to be done about that? The exchange took place hetween H. R. Haldeman and Mr.

> H... I was going to say that it might be to our interest to get it out.

> P. Well, we could easily do that. Leak out certain stuff. We could pretty much control

> The examples could be multiplied. The Watergate committee has collected (and in some instances itself leaked) evidence auggesting that the calculated leak was something of a way of life in Mr. Nixon's White House. But the point is fairly simple and it comes in two general parts. The first is that this business of leaking to the press is, as we have noted an ancient custom: That no one and no political party has a monopoly on it: that it often unfairly wrongs innocent people; and that in this last respect it raises some serious questions well worth serious discussion. The second is that Mr. Buchanan's discussion of it is not serious. His own record and that of the White House he serves demonstrate that his shock is pretty, stagey and that the current campaign of which he is an eager foot soldler has all the characteristics of just one more effort to divert public attention from the real Watergate

This is most emphatically not to deny that the calculated leak has become a pinhlem for the House Judiciary Committee-or that it has also become, to some extent, a problem for the press. At the heart of the problem is a collection of pressures, as contradictory as they are intense, that are bearing in upon the work of the Judiciary Committee.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

'First Strike' Threat

accurate and powerful strategic missile three programs totaling ST7 million in the warheads is undoubtedly motivated by a desire to assure U.S. security. But the new warheads, which could provide a capability for destroying the bulk of Russla's ICBMs in their underground silos, are more certain to reduce U.S. and world security by making nuclear war likelier than ever.

The nuclear war-fighting capability that the Nixon administration seeks in these and related "counterforce" programs would fundamentally transform U.S. nuclear strategy. The U.S. strategy of stable deterrence heretofore has been based on a secure "secondstrike" force, which could survive a surprise Soviet "first strike," then inflict unacceptable damage on the aggressor's industrial and urban centers. Now, President Nixon is seeking weapons that would give him the option of starting a nuclear war, rather than deterring one.

The Illusion that the United States and the Soviet Union could fight a strategic nuclear war limited to military targets is doubly dangerous. It would sobstantailly reduce the inhihition against use of nuclear weapons. Furthermore, with millions of civilian casualtles unavoidable-regardless of how "clean" and accurate the new weapons may berapid escalation into an all-out nuclear exchange would be virtually inevitable. There would be no winners, only losers, in such a nuclear war.

Sen, Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., who led the fight against the new strategic doctrine.

The recent Senate vote to develop more almost achieved a consensus by focustna on $21.9-hillion multary procurement authorization bill. He proposed only a delay whi.a renewed efforts are made to reach a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT-2) with Moscow. The fallure of this eminently reasonable compromise proposal undoubtedly is due to the Pentagon's argument that the U.S.S.R. is also building a capability for counterforce warfare.

> The fact that the Soviet Union, five years after the United States, has developed and begun to test MIRV multiple warhead misslies is now said to justify the change in U.S. policy. On the contrary, American as well as Soviet restraint is essential to achieve a SALT-2 agreement linuting MIRV missiles to levels that would make a first-strike MIRV attempt by either side against the other's land-based missies unprofitable.

> Another chance to debate the issues will come when the Defense Appropriation bill reaches the Senate floor. It should be seized. A major, continuing fight is needed to alert the Congress and the country to the dangers of the qualitative arms race now zetting under war.

Leonid Brezhnes, the Soviet leader in advance of Mr Nixon's trip to Moscow, appeared to be warning of just those dangers when he urged that both the Soviet Union and the United States show maximum restraint on further arms development and reach agreement to prevent the creation of "ever-new systems of attatecto weapons."

Peron in Trouble

Juan Peron has now been hack in the presidency for nine months. But the enthusiasm has waned, as has the relief that marked the end of the military regime. Already, the social package has been torpedoed by trades union refusal to accept the wage freeze and further undermined by the necessity to allow price rises. Inflation proceeds apace, stoked hy unbrioled state expenditure. And although Peron always claimed that terrorism would stop when "the people" as represented by Peron) achieved power, the realities of daily life have shown that it was not just the work of opponents of the military hegemony.

Harassed on all fronts, what can Peron do? He cannot count on his apparently large parliamentary majority, for he knows it is based on promises he cannot fuifill. WASHINGTON. - Ever since Adam-or was it Eve?-leaked the news about that tempting apple and other funny business in the Garden of Eden, the human race has been arguing about the wisdom of leaking forbidden news. The latest chapter in this long story is now unfolding again in Washington.

Sen. Barry Goldwater wants the attorney general to prosecute The Washington Post for leaking confidential PBI documents. Pat Buchanan and Ken Clawson of the White House staff, two of the White House staff, two of the leakiest taps in town want staff members of the House Judiciary Committee to be punished for leaking anti-Nixon information out of the impeachment proceedings. A dreadful underhand practice, they say, and a lot of people agree with them, It should be noted, however, that nobody proposes the abolition of all leaks only the leaks they do not like. It all depends on whose basement is flooded. And this brings us to the theme of this epistle. which is thet the leak is the safety valve of democracy.

A Refuge

It leaves room for honest dissenters It is the refuse of conscience, It can be used for good or evil: disclose the murders of Mr Lai the secret bombing of Cambodia, the cover-up of Watergate. Or it can be used to disrupt elections, to vilify and destroy the political opposition, It is a powerful amortious and sometimes dangerous instrument hut it should not he destroyed without a little thought.

For example, the President de-plores the leak when it is used against him, but it is one of the most effective tools in his own political arsenal and he couldn't get on without it He is constantly running into situations at home and abroad where he wants the truth out but does not want to make things worse hy issuing an official statement confronting his adversaries. So he leaks it through Buchanan or Clawson, or through some embassy abroad to some sympathetic or ambitious reporter. The White House has its "friends list" as well as ita "ene-

And there is nothing new or wicked in this. In the latest crisis between Washington and Moscow nuring the Middle East war when the information here was that the Russians were about to send seven airborne divisions into the Middle East, the President could either have sent an ultimaturn to Lloscow to pull back, or quietly ordered a worldwide alert of American forces and "allowed" the fact to be leaked to the press. He wisely chose the latter method and got his message across to the Bremlin wilnout a direct chai-

As a matter of fact, anybody who has studied or practiced the art of leaking knows that government officials use the leak more than it is used against them, and in most cases reporters are their alites rather than their adversaries, For in many instances, governments are using the leaks to cer the emberrassing truth out erings than to keep it mu

President's men.
Always somebody had to talk out in opposition or in conscience, and leak to the press, usually against government orders. It is an untidy process, often subject to misuse but it shouldn't be knocked or destroyed without a ilttle care. The President needs it as well as the opposition,

& The New York Time

But Destination Is Uncertain Ford Holds the Road

By David S. Broder

NEWBURGH, N.Y.—The regulars on Vice-President Ford'e plane-both staff members and press are keeping two sets of statistics

One is the mileage he has traveled since becoming what he invariably refers to as "the nation's first instant Vice-President" on Dec. 6. That is approaching 100,000 miles with this weekend's journey to California.

The other is the count of the number of times he has told "the telephone story"—a homely, amusing and mildly self-assertive account of how he came to tell the President, who was about to offer him his place in history, to "call me back on the other line."

The telephone story has been told, by most estimates, about 200 times—or once in almost every speech Ford has made in the last Taken together, the two sets of statistics tell you almost every-thing you need to know about Jerry Ford's public life these days: he's traveling like the wind and not sying much of anything.

Elusive and Vague ...

There are those who say that, if Ford just stays active, chusiva and vagua he'll move himself right into the White House in 2.1/2 years—or less.

But a reporter who joined the Ford caravan briefly, for a 10hour faunt last weekend through three upstate New York Republican congressional districts, found the regulars oddly divided on the wisdom of this course. Aching with boredom, some in the Ford entourage think their man is starting to sound like a broken record-a Jerry One-Note who is eroding his own stock of goodwill with his platitudinous peregrinations.

The opposite view is that Ford is demonstrating to these audiences the same kind of open. accessible manner and personality which made him so popular in Washington; that the goodwill of the public and the political gratitude of those for whom he's appearing will stand him in good stead whether he inherits the presidency or decides to compete

No definitive answers to this debate appeared during a single short trip, but there's reason to think the "Jerry stay home" contingent may not have the best of the argument.

There's no question that Ford's basic political speech—tha ona that he will inflict on hundreds of Republican audiences this fall -is excrudatingly small-bore.

As rendered on the stump in New York, the Ford spiel has three ill-fitting parts. You should vote Republican, he says, to avoid a "veto-proof" Congress that. lative dictatorship" in Washington. That's a fair rhetorical ploy. but, the way Ford renders it, trouble himself conjuring n nicture of little Carl Al. tyrannizing the bureaucracy mild-mannered Mike Mans riding roughshod over the sen tion of powers.

His second pitch is to Republican to save "new eralism," but as Bill Safire po ed out in his White House (. "new federalism" is a slogan makes the eves glaze over. His third and final plea i vote Republican to support H Kissinger and Richard Nin / ("the greatest secretary of s and greatest president for p in our history"-against those ing to destroy them by nuendo and leaks."

It was this pitch that got loudest cheers last weekend it is one that some of his frie consider most dangerous to I in the long run-for it ties. to the fate of the Nixon admi tration, rather than emphasihis independence from its [ scandals problems. But all this argument about speeches may really miss point. What sticks in peor minds, I would guess, are Ford's short, wooden talks, his long, leisurely visits.

Ford is unlike Spiro Agnew, liked to make his speech get out. With Ford, the spe seems a necessary preliminar mingling, and he mingles v When I asked the three congrmen for whom he appeared Saturday what kind of comme they had heard after he left, e of them emphasized the persotouch: "He did an extremely g job of getting around." By C. L. Sulzberger

RICHMOND, Va.—The present Italian crisis has been the worst since World War II. The economy remains on the brink collapse; the system of law and order has broken down; the curious formula of administering the state with a nongovernment or, in fact, virtually without government, has reached a dead end; and the tentative groping for compromise between the two main leological groups, Catholics and Communists, has ceased.

The result is a continuing possibility of financial disaster and social disorder with a lame-duck regime floundaring. It is unlikely the population would ever tolerate Communist regime, even if legally produced. It is coursly unlikely it would accept a dictatorship, either Pascist or military. nor is any compromise such as Italian Gaullism possible, Italy has no De Gaulle.

Since the early 1960s Italy has mostly been governed (in theory of an "opening to the left," mean-ing a coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists and Social Democrats, supported by the small Republican party-like the group now hanging on by its teeth. This mixture has changed from time to time and the Christian Democrats themselves are more of a coalition than a party, rang-ing from left-wing to right-wing

Basics Changed

The system managed so long as Western prosperity reigned nurturing Italy's economic recovery, so long as the United States made known it would oppose any Communist takeover, and so long as the Vatican urged voters to oppose its own great enemy, the Kremlin,

But all these basics changed. U.S. policy softened; a national reluctance to assume commitments followed the Vietnam experience, Under Pope John XXIII new Vatican attitude toward. Communism developed. Then. exaggerated by the energy crisis, West European prosperity dis-solved into inflation and fear,

Role of Multinational Firms Divides 40-Nation Conference

(NYT). Forty nations meeting here to draft a proposed world economic charter are deeply divided over definition of the proper role of builtinational corporations in developing coun-

The main division is between developing nations, which claim full authority to control the activities of multinational corporations in their territory, and industrialized countries, which insist that these enterprises also enjoy certain absolute rights. Within each bloc, however, there are also different shades of opinion, with the United States defending the multinational corporations more forcefully than Western Europe, and with Yugoslavia and India emerging as the most outspoken mem-bers of the 22-nation Third World group.

The so-called Economic Charter of the Rights and Duties of States, which was proposed by Mexico in 1972, is intended to establish a code of economic behavior to guide relations he-tween rich and poor countries. A working group of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, currently holding its fourth session here, hopes to complete a final draft of the charter for presentation to the UN General Assembly in New York in September. But diplomatic sources expressed doubt that a consensus would be reached on several key issues during the current three-week session. The working group, therefore, may have to meet again next year. The meeting ends next Friday.

One of the trickiest questions whether the final charter should be a hinding document or merely a recommendation without the force of international law. Sources said the United States was firmly opposed to a binding document and would simply refrain from ratifying any treaty-like economic charter. But many developing nations feel that the charter would be meaningless-"forgotten as soon as it is signed," in the words of one diplomat-unless it were binding.

Both developed and developing nations agree that every state has the right to regulate and supervise multinational corporations to insure that they comply with its laws.

However, the developing nations feel that the countries where multinational corporations have their headquarters-the industrialized world-have duty" to help developing nations control these companies.

by U.S. delegate Stephen Schwibel the concept of "duty" was watered down to suggest that industrialized nations should cooperate "in good faith" to help resolve legal disputes between developing countries and multinational corporations. The United States is also seeking acceptance of a controversial principle that developing nations owe certain "duties" to multimational corporations.

The Artists Who Opened the Renaissance Window

By Michael Gibson

DADUA, Italy (IHT),-"From Giotto to Mantegna" is the ambitious title of an exhibition that recently opened in Padua (at the Palazzo della Ragione to Nov. 4), admirably presented in a breathtaking setting.

It would be a truly miraculous show that could claim to be an encyclopedic presentation of that extraordinary period (Giotto was born in 1166, Mantegna died in 1506) since most of the significant works that were then produced were frescoes, and most of those that survived still cling to the walls where the artists applied them. In fact this is a congregation of 90 paintings and frescoes, a dozen sculptures and some 30 illuminated manuscripts and preclous objects relating to that period. All the paintings have recently been restored and come from museums and churches of Padua and the surrounding area.

Padua however is a small city, and the feast, which is served on such a sumptuous platter (the Palazzo della Ragione, can be rounded off, as the organizers themselves suggest, by visiting: Scrovegni Chapel, covered with Giotto frescoes (and some Franco-Anglo-Russian graffiti of post-Napoleonic days); the nearby Church of the Eremitani, where a few Mantegna frescoes survived the bombing of 1944 (the main survivors were by chance detached and fixed on canvas long be-fore the war, and have momen- have traditionally found shelter. "Venice and Byzantium" exhibifore the war, and have momentarily been transported to the exhibition); the cathedral baptistry with its frescoes by Menabuoi; the city museum and the Chiesa del Santo-the church of Saint Anthony of Padua, who is thastily) invoked by people in auto-mobile accidents, those falling off ladders, mothers of small children standing in the way of trains and, a bit anticlimactically, for help in finding lost objects. The saint's efficiency in all such matters is circumstantially attested to by a vast array of ex-votoes that adorn his shrine and make it one of the most extraordinary monuments of contemporary Ital-

The Palamo della Ragione is a big public building dating from year 1219, flanked by two marketplaces, and buttressed on either side by a long gallery

The striking thing about it is that as you step through the relatively narrow door leading to the exhibition, you find yourself standing in a single large hall which is, in fact, the whole interior of the building except for the ground floor. Some 240 feet long and 80 wide, it is decorated with some charming frescoes (the original decoration by Giotto was destroyed by fire in 1420) and covered by an immense vaulted roof in the shape of a ship's keel. This towering space is rendered even more impressive by the Gattamelata) by Donatello. The exhibition somebow survives the setting and indeed lives in harmony with it. It is, I think, worth looking at as the

"Venice and Byzanthum" exhibition at the Doges' Palace in Venice. The period extending from Glotto to Mantegna achieved a break with the Byzantine and Gothic view and emerges into the Renaissance.

Giotto himself is rather symbolically represented by a tall painted crucifix that normally stands in the Scrovegni chapel Forty-eight painters in all are shown, and all of them were active in Padua which, until it was conquered by the Venetians in 1405 (Venice is only 20 miles away) was an independent city-The exhibition and its Paduan context effectively illustrate the arduous penetration of movement and of space into an art emerging from the golden shadow of Byzantium, The "breakthrough," of course, is Giotto. His space might strike the casual viewer as naïve whereas it is in fact the perfect expression of a new drift of thought and feeling. To the extent that such matters allow any sort of general statement, one may say that the new spirit was epitomized by Francis of Assisi and in particular by his conception of the "imitation of Christ which somehow gave the present a foothold in eternity. Francis died in 1226 and was canonized two years later and Giotto, born 40 years later, was to be the foremost illustrator of his life, The Franciscan sense of the coming of God into the humble, temporal world lent this world a dignity and time itself a quality that one does not find in the Byzantine universe which, while it held the same belief, somehow had a different feeling for it. Giotto's space is a subjective fact, not a scientific concept. It represents a moment of balance between time and eternity. There are some delicious shortcuts, as when he removes one whole side of a house to show us what is going on inside.

But the Gothic forces were still strong after Glotto's death. Movement, however, begins to appear everywhere, even in Guariento's angels and quite ob-viously in Semitecolo's life of Saint Sebastian.

The Renaissance itself begins discreetly, in the background. Take the Saint Jerome polyptych by Squarcione, the master of Mantegna. Behind the saint's table is a perspective view into a fantastic landscape, Mantegna himself just stepped out into it.

He did more, of course. He be-came fascinated with the past, with Roman antiquity, and introduced this element into his work. He also studied the construction of space in a systematic way, creating an immense dramatic area in the foreground and suggesting a limitless distance beyond, out of reach to the imagination and to sensibility, where all his lines implacably converge.

Giotto portrayed an eventsomething that extends into time. But Mantegna is among the first to give us the dramatic instant: In the martyrdom of Saint Christopher, a fresco to be seen in the exhibition, there are two men standing behind an open window. One of them has been hit in the eye by an arrow, the other gasps in horror and clutches his arm. It is the instant of emotion that is new here, for Gothic painters had of course already shown arrows in flight, but their emotions were of the slow and durable sort.

Such, then, are the steps of the extraordinary process that oc-curred in that age: A window was opened in the timeless Gothic golden background, a landscape appeared behind the holy figures. Thereafter one was able to step out into it and nothing was ever the same again. Even though saints and deities appeared once more in the landscape, they were no longer in the same world— and one may rightly say that the

By Souren Melikian

DARIS, June 21 (IRT), The last group of books from the famous Raphael Esmerian collection was sold this week at Palais Galliera an auction that aroused great interest because of Esmerian's reputation as a bibliophile and art connoisseu

A New York dealer in gems, born and educated in Paris, smerian was particularly interested in rare Renaissance books—that part of his collection was sold two years ago and was the finest collection of its sort to come up at public auction since 1929. Bibliophiles, aware of the scope of Esmerian's interests, were eager o see what the modern side of his collection was like.

There were two stars in the sale wonducted by Etieune Ader) that were revelations to non-professionals and surprised some pecialists.

The Esmerian Legrato album is a major collection of preparaory drawings, matched only by a companion volume now in the bibliothèque Nationale. Both were at one time in Daniel Sidelea's brary, which was sold in 1963. The Bibliothèque Nationale received a album as a gift white Esmerian got the other.

In the splendid catalogue, which Esmerian missed on having rinted for Tuesday's sale, experts Georges Bisizot and Claude Justio emphasized the album's importance, which apart from sheer eauty, could be regarded as "a priceless documentary collection or the instory of French bookbinding." Bearing such considerations n mind, the price was moderate—101.700 francs.

Nuch the same was true of the other gem in the sale. It can e classified as one of the two or three finest illustrated books e classified as one of the two or three times. Indicated books sublished in France in the 20th century—it was Paul Verlaine's Parallèlement." illustrated by 109 Pierre Bonnard lithographs and the woodblocks made from Bonnard's drawings by Tony Beltrand. This in quarto edition was commissioned by Ambroise Vollard, the amous dealer. An original full page sketch in red pencil by Bonard was bound into the book.

According to connoisseurs, this is the perfect book, written by great poet, illustrated by a great painter at the height of his owers, superbly laid out and bound by a great designer, Pierre egrain. It made 314,000 francs. Huge as the sum may seem in the syman, the figure was deemed merely "acceptable" by a connois-eur who asked not in be identified. It would be rash to be categorical about the price for such a cok. But other books in the same sale appeared to support the lew that prices were on the high side, but not really high.

For example, a copy of "Jazz" printed in Paris in 1947 with plates made from collages and decoupages by Matisse, made 3,700 francs. Only a few days before, another copy had made 2,300 Swiss francs at an auction conducted by Kornfeld and Chestein in Bern-this is about 65 percent more than the

Another very good book in the Esmerian sale was "L'Enchan eer Pourrissant" by Guillaume Apollmaire, illustrated with wood by Guillaume Apolinaire, illustrated with woodslocks by André Derain. As with Bonnard's book, the work had neen commissioned by a great dealer—Kahnweiler—in 1909. Some connoisseurs regard this as the first book illustrated with cubist art. It was also Derain's first printed book. The Esmerian copy strought 55,700 francs. At Kornfeld and Klipstein, another copy and fetched 67,200 Swiss francs. It included an original—but very jad—sketch by Derain which accounts for the difference in price in this case Paris and Bern prices were about even.

Another comparison might suggest that books do better in illustrated. Bern Honoré Balzac's "Le Che? d'Oeuvre Inconnu," illustrated with original etchings and woodblocks by Picasso and published by Ambroise Vollard in 1931, made 46,700 francs in Paris. In Bern, it went for 50,250 Swiss francs. But, in fact, the Swiss market is not better than the French-if only because most big private col-Sectors probably prefer to come to Paris rather than go to Bern. The professionals attend all the sales anyway. But the Esmerian sale book place in the most favorable circumstances, attracting inter-national dealers and connoisseurs.

My own feeling is that a certain sluggishness in prices and t is no more than that—is due to a fairly recent but now perceptible reticence of buyers in a number of traditionally "sound" fieldswhich offer little opportunity for speculation.

U.K. Firm Talks With Bankers

Court Line Ltd., whose shares have been suspended from trading at its request, says discussions with its bankers and with various authorities "are proceeding actively in a sympa-thetic and positive spirit." Court Line's shares plimged on the London Stock Enchange yester day amid rumors conceroing its financial posi-tion. They closed at 13 pence, down 10, after falling as low as 5. Their 1974 high is 59. Court Line says it asked for the suspinsion of Its share listing because of the recent movement in the share price and the wide publicity this has attracted. It says its discussions with its bankers, the Department of Trade, the Department of Industry and the Civil Aviation Authority will take a few days. The board then proposes to make a detailed statement with a view to the share listing being restored. Court Line is Britain's largest holiday tour operator. It owns shipping and shipbullders and Court Line Aviation, which carried two million pas sengers last year.

Mr. Butz made his remarks at a news conference after an appearance before the House Agriculture Committee during which he softened his department's previous resistance to legislation for guaranteed loans to help meat producers through their emergency.

Cattle and hog producers are "dire straits." he told newsmen. He said the problem that had focused previously on feedlot operators, who fatten cattle for market, had now spread to those who raise the calves. He said those "cow-call men" are now selling at a loss.

Prime Rate Boost Is Investor Worry

NEW YORK, June 21 (Reuters).-Wall Street was bombarded with negative news today and that sufficed to extend the losing streak to six sessions on the New York Stock Exchange.

A 1/4-point boost to 11 1/2 percent in the prime rate by two large New York banks and a sharp jump in the May consumer price index headed the list of problems for investors.

The Dow Jones industrial average declined 5.40 to 815.39. Declining issues led gainers by about 1.025 to 350.

Volume totaled 11.83 million shares compared with 11.99 million resterday.

Analysts said market sentiment elso was hampered by the sharp rise in business loan demand reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York after the market had closed yesterday. While the rise in weekly loan demand had been expected because of seasonal factors (to pay quarterly income taxes: It nevertheless appeared to raise concern that interest rates may not have peaked, as had been believed two weeks ago when some banks began trimming prime lending rates.

stuif from the South than the best dithyrambs of Yankees," he urged one editor, and soon chough the Double Dealer, based in New Orleans, was publishing Faulkner and Allen Tate as well as Hemingway and Sherwood Adderson. The Poetry Society of South Carolina began importing such poets as Amy Lowell. Cari Sandburg and Robert Frost to lecture, and before long the South herself was producing such distinguished poets as Robeit Penn Warren, John Crowe Ransom and Donald Davidson.

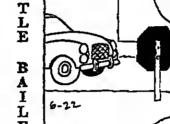

la 1919 the nation boasted 83 lyucidings, most of them taking place in the South. By 1929 lunchings had largely given way to such different explosions of Southern genius as "Look Home-ward, Angel." "Sartoris" and "The Sound and the Fury." The New South was born in the 1920s, and to an extent hitherto unappreciated. Mencken was its midwife.

By the end of the decade, however. Mencken had somewhat lost interest in prodding the South-and had married the lovely and talented Alabama writer, Sara Haardt. The Pugitive group in Tennessee, repelled by Mencken's carnival attitude to the Scopes "Monkey" Trial of 1925 and aware of his shortcomings as a critic of poetry. turned from him and discovered values in the Southern agrarian fundamentalist tradition to which Mencken, in his cosmopolitanism, had been rather bline. W. J. Cash, in his youth a Mencken disciple, declared his independence in 1941 with his magnificent book. The Mind of the South." Clearly, by that time the South was prepared to stand un its own feet, and since then has made a contribution to the national letters far in exress of its size, population, or economic clout. His work done, Mencken turned to his later preoccupations of philology, autobiography and FDR-baiting.

"Scrpent in Eden" bears all the dreary stigmata of a converied PhD thesis. Its 189 pages of text groan beneath the weary hurden of 910 footnotes. Yet it is unique for its genre in being both well written and in having something to say. Mrs. Ruth asked if I got the telegram she sent me when I hit 715. and I told her I had. That was something, a little country kid from Mobile at City Hall where so many great Americans have been honored. But that thing was so great because so many black kids got a chance to see the baseball and the bat that I hit 715 with. They'd never get a chance otherwise, because the baseball and the bat will be mostig at big business conventions and I enjoyed that, especially going through Harlem with the kids, because it reminded me of when I was a little kid in Mobile and there was a thing like that for Jackie Robinson on Davis Avenue there. I spoke to the kids just like he did in Mobile when I was one of the kids."

But the price of fame often is secluded in a hotel room registered under a different name.

"But the kids always find me." he said. "And once they do, the club has to put a security guard outside the room. It's not that you don't want to sign auto-graphs, but you do want some privacy. What is smaring is that anybody should have expected more from Brazil, and that anybody should be surprised by the poverty of the Brazilian play. True, Brazil has won the World Cup. three times out of line last four, and should really have won it in 1950, when Uruguay beat Brazil And true, it has produced some the greatest teams and most dazzling players that the sport has known.

But Walter Winterbottom, the former manager of the England team, was quite right when he once said, "All great leams are built round three or four great players. It was certainly true of Brazil in 1958, 1962 and 1970, There was every possibility, after its World Cup victory in Mexico, that it would do it again. Who was to know, in those moments of euphoria in the Azlec Stadium, that the incomparable Pelc would refuse to play another World Cuo. that Tostao's eve innery would prove incurable, that the subtle Gerson would drop out, injured; that even the admirable Clodoaldo would be hurt on the eve of the present tournament?

The lack of a nerent centers forward has been extraordinary. Brazil is expected tomorrow to throw Eduardo Edu into the front line-but he is a winger. Of Edu, let it be said that his has been a strangely wayward cereer. On the way to the World Cup (mals of 1966 in England. Brazil gave him his chance in Sweden as a 16-year-old leftwinger. I saw him play in Gothenburg and thought him full of promise, but Brazil hadn't the courage to give him his chance in Liverpool. By 1970, he had put on much weight and was a World Cup substitute, no more. Tomorrow, he could hard-ly do worse than Valdomiro, who played in the opening game, Rivelino has been a huge disappointment. Just before the 1968 World Cup, he was being canvassed as a rival to Gerson for the position of orchestrator in midfield. Marlo Zagalo, the tcam coach, resolved the problem by using Gerson in that role, Rivelino as a deep-lying leftwinger. But now Gerson lias gone and Rivelino has, in the vernacular, blown it, showing neither the depth nor the originality of a great constructive forward. Moreover, he was guilty against Scotland of a couple of very nasty fouls, "off the ball"-

Those who marveled at this, and at the ruthleseness of such as Luis Percira, are a little maive. Violent play has too often characterised the Brazilian team, for all its skill. "It's hard to explain. You see, there were some people working for his re-election who decided to find out what the other political party was doing by bugging its headquarters."

"Mais oui," François said, "What is wrong with that?"

"It wasn't just a question of bugging the opposition's office. They also discovered that people working for the President had large amounts of cash which were using to sabotage the President's opponents."

"Naturellement. What else would they do if they were trying to beat the other party?" "You don't understand, Francois. What they were doing was illegal"

"I understand perfectly," Francois said rather irritably. "But what is wrong with doing something illegal to win an election?" * 4 *

Well, it wasn't just a question of the President's people doing something illegal. It turned out that when the people involved were arrested, an effort was made to cover up the crume so nobody would know anyone in the White House had anything to do with it."

"François, how can I make you understand? There was one political scandal after another. The Vice-President of the United States was forced to resign for taking bribes. The White House kept an enemies list which they were going to use to get people criticized the President. They also hired plumbers to break into people's homes and offices. One thing led to another, and pretty soon there was some ouestion of whether the President of the United States himself was involved,"

"In France we would have been very disappointed if our President wasn't involved." "Then there were other scondals. Mr. Nixon forgot to pay $465,000 in income taxes."

"Vire Niron!" François said. "Then it was discovered that the President had tape-recorded everyone who came into his office. François's eyes bugged out. "Alors, why didn't you say that before? Now I understand why you want to impeach him."

Frugal Existence of Werner Knoxton, Retired

By Jon Nordheimer

TSLA VISTA, Calif., (NYT) .- A journey that began in the finel year of the last century in a small Swiss canton has carried Werner Knoxton to a cramped room in a former college dormitory situated near the surf of the California coastline.

It's been a half-century since the Swiss immigrant and his Australian bride opened a tearoom in Manhattan called the Kangaroo, and nearly two decades have passed since the couple sold a 200acre camp in Vermont that they had acquired after they ahandoned the city in search of a more pastoral existence.

Actual retirement came in 1965 when they put most of their life savings into mutual funds to "guarantee" a steady annual income and moved across the country to California to settle in a cottage in Ojai, a small valley community nestled in the Santa Ynez Mountains, about 40 miles east of Santa Barbara. After a few years of a frugal but pleasant existence, things started to fall apart for the Knoxtons. First there was ill health and its related expenses, but since 1968 the Knoxtons have had to deal with inflation, and like other Americans on fixed incomes, the struggle reduced their aiready spartan existence to one of steady financial decline and impoverishment. Mary Knoxton, 14 years older than her husband, died last year at the age of 88. Werner Knoxton, at 75, is going blind and poor circulation in his legs is rapidly crippling him. He is alone, a man who has outlived his friends and family, and dares only one hope. "My only concern now is that I don't outlive my savings," he said in the dim half-light that filtered into his room Bt Friendship Manor, a nonprofit residence for the aged no the edge of the campus at the University of California at Santa Barbara

"I've never been on welfare and now that Mary's gone and doesn't need me to care for her I'd just as soon go myself than get welfare," he went on, "It's an old man's silly pride."

11 Million People

Although Knoxton's background is not typical of the average elderly American, his difficulties sum up the troubles faced by an estimated 5 percent of the national population—some 11 million persons-those whose retirement incomes have been eroded by doublefigure inflation to the point where they exist in a lonely world of porerty and disillusionment.

According to a federal government survey, 87 percent of those 65 or older live on an income of less than $5,000 a year. Twenty-five percent exist on less than $1,500.

For the most part, inflation for this segment of America does not mean a choice between necessities and frills. It forces hard decisions about which necessities are to be reduced or eliminated because the inxuries were long ago abandoned.

"We were so naive," Knoxton said with a wistful glance at a photograph of his late wife that rests on the grained surface of a pine drop-leaf table, one of the pieces of furniture he has managed to hang on to through the years. The couple was childless. "We were never particularly money-minded, and I guess that was our trouble. Who could guess that prices would go like this? That land we sold in Vermont in 1954 for $30,000 is probably worth a quarter-million dollars today. Who could foresee that an investment in real estate would be much safer than money in the stock market?

The first place the couple felt the pinch was in rising food prices, he said, but they were adept in finding ways to cut major food costs without a corresponding sacrifice in untrition.

Meatless Chili

"My wife had a pretty good touch for this kind of thing. Her specialty was a meatless soybean chili that actually tasted pretty

However there was no way to skimp on medical expenses not covered by Medicare. In recent years he explained, they began to consume 25 to 30 percent of their budget. His nwn deteriorating eyesight, B combination of diabetes and glaucoms, and a worsening arthritic condition suffered by his wife, caught the couple in a spiral of costs that are into their savings as the plunging stock market critically cut income from the investment in mutual funds.

For Knoxton, his wife's death was simply another step closer to despair. Neighbors found him a few weeks later inside the coftage, half-starved and nearly blind, unable to care for himself, and they took him to Friendship Manor, a converted college residence which now serves the needs of the aged.

There, at least, his physical needs are met. Knoxton pays $138 a month for his one room and S70 B month for his meals. His biggest expense beyond this is for medicine and vitamins, which average about $50 a month. He liked to bny his nwn wholewheat bread at a local grocery to eat with his meals, but in the one year he's been there, the cost of B loaf has gone from 39 cents to 53 cents.

Private Possessions

Nearly blind and hobbled now, he spends most of his time in his room, when he is not taking meals in the cafeteria, comforted by a few private possessions.

Late at night, as he listens to classical music in his room, the old man often sits hunched at his pine table with a magnifying glass and opens a photo album that is filled with smiling young children in striped polo shirts and khaki shorts at a summer camp in Vermont: snapshots pasted on pages worn thin by fingers searching out memories.

At one elbow is the smiling photo of his wife, and at the other is a Swiss calendar always turned to the month of May in 1966, a page that displays a glorious color view of Ligerz on the Bieler See, the old man's native village where he was born in the final year of the last century.
